Dental Informatics: Strategic Issues for the Dental Profession

The number of dental specialists is increasing, but will only get to about 20 percent of dentists by the year 2000. Looking at the basic operation of dental practices, they require a relatively low capital investment to get started. For example, a general practice can be started with an initial expenditure of under $100,000. Another interesting fact is that there is fairly high turnover in dental practice staff; it is estimated that close to 50 percent of staff are lost within two years.
